LECTURE TOPICS

- At what age should we begin lessons?
a. I begin at about 8yrs. but you can begin at any age.
b. Reading ability
c. Concentration

• Classical vs Musical Theater and Popular at early ages.
  a. Popular ie. Disney, animated, easy MT
  b. Easy songs for S,M,T,B; Solos for Kids, 36 solos for Young Singers

• At what age should we begin foreign language and which one/s?
  a. As soon as possible if the child shows no resistance.
  b. Begin with Dites-moi or Nel cor piu non mi sento, International Folk Songs.
  c. Later Bergerettes, Eng. Royal School of Music or Royal Canadian School

• Advanced repertoire at early ages: what and how much?
  a. Depends on aptitude and desire on child=s part.
  b. Hold off arias and/or redirect when possible.
  c. If child persists you may find abbreviated version or some simple arias AGrandi Operisti per Giovanni Cantanti@ a possibility as well as some early Mozart.

• Theory, sight singing, rhythm
  a. Good to have a structured program ie. MTAC but if none available, do it yourself.
  b. So important esp. for potential music majors.
  c. Stress piano lessons when possible (class piano), universities looking for well-rounded students.

• Recitals, competitions, evaluation programs.
  a. Begin with recitals and evaluation programs and move to competitions as soon as they will.
  b. Emphasize doing it for the experience.
  c. The experience makes them more confident and more accustomed to auditions.

• Should we teach through the young male voice change?
  a. Yes. The guys will be singing during this time so it=s better to guide them.
  b. The transition is much smoother with less popping; student retains high range with less problems with continued training.

• What are the typical ages?
  a. Boys 12 - 15
  b. Girls 11 - 14

• What changes take place and what are the first signs?
  a. Hands, feet, growth spurt.
  b. Boys voices gain progressively more notes in lower register while retaining high.

• What are the typical problems?
  a. High becomes progressively more difficult and loses clarity.
  b. Often a hole appears between approx. F above middle C and C above middle C. (This is what will soon be the head or head mix of the changed voice and takes a few years to come in with any strength and should not be forced.)
  c. An excess of air in the tone is inherent in many young voices because all their laryngeal muscles do not develop at the same rate. The muscles inside the larynx suddenly and dramatically outgrow those outside the larynx.

• Progression through the mid to late teens.
  a. Some boys= voices march down the scale.
  b. Others drop low and then come back up.
  c. Once the voice settles, it normally has a range of about an octave and slowly adds notes above and below.
  d. Per Richard Alderson AComplete Handbook of Voice training@ There is evidence showing that the younger a boy is when his voice changes, the lower and heavier the voice will be. Some of these low voices tend to rise (in tessatura) as he matures.
  e. Planning ahead for recitals or competitions is very challenging.
  f. It is necessary to find repertoire of limited range in multiple keys as the voice often changes on a monthly basis.
  g. Schubertline, Sibelius or other notation software.

• How do girls differ? Compare ranges.
  a. Girls stay in the same octave but typically lose clarity while gaining depth.
  b. Potential mezzos may have been high sopranos in unchanged voice. These voices often change quite radically, losing top and gaining much warmth in lower and middle voice. There seems to be no correlation between range in girls unchanged voice with range in changed voice according to Alderson.
  c. Some voices become very low and husky and others, seem to change very little in range, gaining mainly in quality and depth.
  d. Again it is often necessary to choose songs that have many keys available or take time to transpose or have a good software notation program.

• Are we assigning too much material of a difficult nature too soon?
  With the competitive nature of our society it is difficult to not be pulled into assigning very difficult and challenging material to our most gifted and ambitious students.
